

Greetings from your library and Credo!

Do you need to check a definition, understand a literary reference or a scientific term? Tired of getting too many irrelevant results from Web search engines when you need quick, accurate answers? Need trustworthy reference information with properly formatted citations for your footnotes?

Let your library and Credo Reference help.

Credo Reference is now a part of your library's online reference collection, and it features full-text content from hundreds of reference books covering a broad range of subjects. It's a search engine like Google, but instead of searching the entire Internet, your results come from a comprehensive library of trusted reference sources without advertisements, clutter, or irrelevant hits.

Here is a quick guide to Credo to help you get the most out of it.

Credo Reference Overview

You have unlimited 24/7 access to Credo Reference from your library. In addition to using the service in your library, you can also access it from your home or office if your library offers remote access to electronic resources.

With Credo, you get content from hundreds of reference books covering every major subject. There are over 2.5 million entries, 65,000+ images (art, diagrams, maps and photos) and over 93,000 audio pronunciation files. The content is enriched by a network of cross-reference links that cut across topics, titles and publishers to give you accurate, contextual results.

Do You Need To...

- Get results with images or sound files? You can prioritize your search results to view those with images or audio files, or rank results by relevancy or length.
- See related results from other sources? In addition to cross-reference links within the same title, entries include related entries, which link to entries throughout the database. Credo References allow you to easily navigate between entries on related topics and can guide you to the most relevant information related to your research.
- Find topic ideas for papers or research projects? Use Credo's Concept Map, a visual map that displays the connections between search results and topics in an interactive format. With the Concept Map, you can quickly find information when you're not quite sure where to start or want to expand your knowledge of a given area. You can access the Concept Map from any set of search results, or check it out here.
- Access statistical international or census data that you can customize and export? The CIA World Factbook and The US Census 2000 State and County QuickFacts feature customizable and interactive tables that allow you to add columns to compare data, sort by column, and export and chart tables.
- Be able to cite your information easily? You can select APA, MLA or Chicago style for any entry viewed. Credo will format the citation for you!
- Do some browsing? Adjacent entries are included. These are the three entries that appear alphabetically before and after the entry that you are viewing.
- Email an entry to a friend? You can email an entry to any other Credo subscriber with one click.
